

Progress on Applying the Roseman Model to the Medical Program

RU is recognized for applying with success the Mastery Model to health science education. How will that translate to the medical education program? A self-selected group of faculty have been working to define each "hexagon" principle in the pre-clerkship and clerkship years. Each hexagon has also been explained with regards to the application, i.e., what does this look like, with the predicted outcomes and advantages from that implementation. The group is putting together this work into a potential "white paper" that will guide further program development.

Webinars for Faculty

The OAA is pleased to transmit a 5-part webcast audio seminar series offered by the International Association of Medical Science Educators (IAMSE) throughout the month of March.

The series is entitled "Remediation in Health Science Education": The goal of remediation is to correct the course of students who have gone astray in their journey to become a health professional. However, because of the varying components in a professional health science curriculum including basic science knowledge, clinical skills, and professionalism coupled with ever changing curricular modifications; effective remediation in health science education has become a complex issue with many challenges.

Please take a moment to explore the Faculty Education pages for upcoming offerings on various topics related to medical education.
